

Hispanic Heritage Month 2023

Latin American and LatinX Architecture Exhibition

This exhibition celebrates architecture and cities in Latin America and the work of LatinX architects in the U.S. and around the world. It showcases images of Latin American cities and modern architecture from the twentieth and twenty-first century including a broad range of public buildings, social housing projects, and private residences. The exhibition provides an insight on the production of urban and architectural form considering a variety of architectural language and modern styles. We hope the work of this exhibition contributes to conversations about transnational linkages in the Americas.
